

GEORGE W. ENGLISH

FEBRUARY 26 (calendar day, MARCH 2), 1925.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. REED, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following

REPORT

[To accompany H. J. Res. 347]

The Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the resolution (H. J. Res. 347), having considered the same, report thereon with the recommendation that it be passed.

The above resolution was passed by the House of Representatives for the purpose of enabling one of its committees during the coming recess to continue to investigate the official conduct of George W. English, United States district judge for the eastern district of Illinois, and to report to the House whether said English has been guilty of such conduct as requires the interposition of the constitutional powers of the House. The passage of the resolution is asked because the House desires that its committee shall proceed immediately with the business in hand. There is a question whether the committee can, under the circumstances, act with full authority unless this or a similar resolution is passed. There seems to be no reason why the Senate should not concur in the resolution.
